(May 15, 2022) — Recently, a post appeared at The P&E addressing the truly remarkable documentary, “2000 Mules” released by Dinesh D’Souza in collaborative partnership with True the Vote.

That post was preceded by one from your humble servant reaching essentially the same conclusion: the film documents what is almost certainly a lead-pipe kill-shot – also known in criminal circles as “take a dirt nap” and in courtrooms as “beyond a reasonable doubt” – to the claim that the 2020 general election was “the most secure in history.” Wrong: more like one parsec from it.

In reality, the film convincingly proves that the 2020 general election was fatally corrupted in five “swing” states: Arizona, Georgia, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. The lethal compromising was accomplished in no small part – and largely in the wee hours of the morning – by over 2000 political operatives. These were the “mules” paid to harvest, transport and illegally “stuff” ballot drop boxes with “just enough” fraudulent votes to tip the popular vote in those states, and thus, their Electoral College votes, in favor of the Goofball now occupying the Oval Office. Interestingly, most of the mainstream media –including Fox News – is ignoring the documentary.

Ah, but not one Hamilton Fish. Yes, Virginia, someone bearing (or borrowing) the same name as the Secretary of State in the Ulysses S. Grant Administration back in the 1870’s is paying attention to the issue. Recall that the original Secretary of State Fish was the person who received Attorney General Pierrepoint's "Steinkauler" letter of advice. That letter – quoted by the Supreme Court in Perkins v. Elg and deceptively manipulated by the Congressional Research Service in support of the purported "natural born citizen" status of one Barack Hussein Obama, Jr. – is addressed here and here. But that is a whole 'nother story.

Back to text, commenting on the more recent post, the avatar of Secretary Fish notes: "[t]he movie, which D'Souza has claimed has grossed over $10 million so far, failed to show that anyone was paid to harvest ballots in the 2020 election." Really?

Monsieur Fish apparently missed (or intentionally ignored) that segment of the film (beginning at the 1:02:05 mark) where an identity-masked witness who was part of the ballot trafficking operation and who is now cooperating with Yuma County, Arizona investigators confirmed that precisely the ballot harvesting payment scheme that Fish denies the documentary showed... was shown. On video. With sound.

Ominously, the witness added that anyone like her found to be trying to better educate elderly Hispanics whose ballots had been harvested on the law and legitimate election processes – let alone cooperating with election integrity officials – could wind up "in the trash can... in pieces..." 1:05:52. Most secure election in history..., right....

As noted at The P&E here, the founder of True The Vote, Catherine Engelbrecht, promises that there will be a lot more revelations coming in the near future, including in a production she calls "Ripcord."

One wonders if Monsieur Fish will be paying attention to that documentary as well. If he does, he should watch the whole thing more carefully and avoid premature reliance on mis- and disinformation emanating from the Left.

Stay tuned.
