

Specifically, Lofgren tried to support her argument for more documents by claiming... wait for it... wait for it... that “documents don’t lie.”

Whoa... seriously? From a Democrat?

Lofgren, being a member of the Party of Intellectual Termites (“PIT”) – and with apologies for slandering all genuine termites – has seemingly forgotten, or more likely intentionally dismissed, the fact that many documents do, in fact, lie. Moreover, many are intentionally structured to lie. Perhaps the ultimate proof of that lies in that which has been addressed here at The P&E for over a decade: the 99.99% certain fraudulent birth certificate of one Barack Hussein Obama, Jr.

As comprehensively and repeatedly noted here; here; here and here, a Mount Everest of empirical factual evidence exists that the “image” of a purported “original Hawaiian birth certificate” of Mr. Obama posted on the Internet is, in fact, fraudulent. Stated otherwise, it memorializes and perpetuates a lie, i.e., that Mr. Obama was born in Honolulu, Hawaii and was therefore eligible to the presidency as a “natural born Citizen” under Art. 2, § 1, Cl. 5 of the Constitution. Not so.

Moreover, staying with the “documents don’t lie” narrative deployed by Lofgren today, certain other documents issued by the Congressional Research Service (“CRS”) on the “natural born Citizen” eligibility issue also come very close to falling into the categories of “lies” or “fraudulent documents.” The reasons for that conclusion are found, among other places, here; here; and here.

Accordingly, when Lofgren asserts that “documents don’t lie,” she should be reminded of the foregoing examples which plainly contradict that contention. On second thought, PIT members do not care about any factual evidence which undercuts their narrative. They deflect and just move on. Yet another reason to vote out of office every single Democrat up for reelection next November.

With their hypocrisy and one-size-fits-all “Orange Man Bad” blinders firmly affixed, the PIT is once again demonstrating in the Senate exactly why they have forfeited any claim of right, acumen or competency to govern a free people in a constitutional republic such as the United States of America.

Microwave some more popcorn. Chug another Diet Coke. Vote GOP in November.
