

The BleachBit Bimbo

by Joseph DeMaio, ©2021

Source: Hillary Clinton Twitter account

(Nov. 30, 2021) — Wayne Allyn Root is a conservative commentator who has just produced perhaps one of the more disturbing posts of the year at his website, predicting that in the not-too-distant future, the nation may be subjected to a Hillary Clinton presidency. Yikes.

Many folks dismiss Root as a far-right conspiracy theorist not worthy of serious attention. And yet, as he not so modestly points out, his political and general predictions in the past have proven to be largely accurate. He is no Nostradamus and certainly no Rush Limbaugh. That said, those who would ignore his latest prediction do so at their peril.

Briefly stated, Root hypothesizes that now realizing that his utility as a figurehead “Corn Pop Warrior” has run its course, the Goofball’s marionette masters’ gambit will be to “buy off” Kamala Harris, getting her to resign. Root suggests a $25 million mansion, a paltry offering by DC standards. This will allow the Goofball at 1600, as one of his last substantive acts, to nominate a replacement.

The plan, of course, would be to install Clinton – for now, let us call her the BleachBit Bimbo – as vice-president, then quickly move to Phase 2, the oh-so-regrettable, but necessary resignation and retirement of the Goofball himself.

Root again suggests a measly $25 million mansion for the Goof's wife to buy her silence. Voilà! The Bimbo gets to sit where her hubby engaged in the “extreme mentoring” of Monica Lewinsky. It is the height of irony..., depending, of course, on what the meaning of “is”... is. Root caps off his prediction that, come 2024, Clinton would conscript Michelle Obama to run as her vice-president, capturing “every last black vote in 2024.”

Not so fast, Root.

Foto-Rabe, Pixabay, License

The 25th Amendment requires a majority vote of both the House and the Senate for the Bimbo to first ascend to the vice-presidency. While she might be able to garner a majority vote in the House, her chances of doing that in the Senate are less certain. And given the freight train of baggage that she lugs around, it is not altogether certain that she could pull off a majority vote in either chamber. Hillary Clinton, with all of her character warts and moles, remains a loathsome viper slithering along the political sidelines.

Clinton's load of baggage, of course, includes her conceptual and financial collusion with the FBI, the Department of Justice and a host of other three-letter federal agencies involved in the fraudulent “Trump-Russia Collusion” hoax; her intentional (and felonious) destruction of over 30,000 emails illegally stored on her “homebrew” computer system while she was Secretary of State under Obama, the Second Usurper-in-Chief (“SUC”); and, of course, the still lingering shadow of her role in the deaths of Ambassador Christopher Stevens, along with Sean Smith, Tyrone Woods and Glen Doherty back in 2012 during the Benghazi attack, as discussed here.

Recall that rumors continue to swirl around the question of whether the attack was in reality a botched kidnapping attempt conceived by the viper and the SUC. That last trunk might prove to be her final undoing, because there is no statute of limitations on murder or felony murder..., assuming that a prosecution is even ever undertaken.

Long story, short: even if one subscribes to the Root theory that the Bimbo could be positioning herself on the sidelines to become first, vice-president and second, president, the best way to stop that gambit in its tracks is to (1) read this, then (2) forward it to your representative in Congress with a suggestion that it be explored and, with any luck, implemented.

Now. Not next week or next month.

Now.