

The Courteous Thing to Do

“GIVE IT SOME THOUGHT”

by Joseph DeMaio, ©2020

Photo: Nancy Pelosi's website

(Feb. 7, 2020) — Those who held out any hope for the beginning of a healing process following President Trump’s State of the Union address had their dreams shattered within seconds of the end of his delivery. Knowing that within 24 hours of the SOTU speech, the Senate would vote to acquit President Trump on the two articles of impeachment, the Shrew from San Crapcisco – aka Nancy (“watch-your-step-on-Market-Street”) Pelosi – could not contain herself. As soon as the President had assured the nation that “the best is yet to come,” she proceeded to tear in half the several pages of President Trump’s State of the Union speech, a copy of which he had handed to her. The video clip of her classless and petulant antic came at the end of President Trump’s speech and has gone viral.

Her juvenile stunt was, of course, premeditated and not the result of some instantaneous moment of “temporary insanity.” Well prior to the end of the speech, video footage captured The Wretch “pre-tearing” the pages of the copy, thus making it easier for her to complete the rips later for greater cinematic impact.

But her post-ripping comments disclose her true motives. When asked why she did it, she responded that “it was the courteous thing to do given the alternatives.”

Really?

And what, Madam Wretch, might those alternatives have been? Bunching the pages into a ball, igniting them and throwing them at President Trump? Standing up from your throne, putting the pages on the floor at your feet and then doing to them what vagrants do to the sidewalks and asphalt of Market Street?

Memo to Pelosi: you are a disgrace to the House of Representatives, a disgrace to California, and a disgrace to the Constitution. It is clear that your enablers and sycophants will do nothing to curb your antics, so you might want to consider looking inward and rethink your life. Stated otherwise, the dignified and courteous thing for you to do now, as a favor to America, is to resign from the House.

Knowing, however, that dignity and courtesy are characteristics which you have long ago jettisoned – the rebuttable presumption being that you once possessed them prior to discarding them – in your quest to destroy Donald Trump, America would be satisfied if you just stepped aside as Speaker of the House. Hey, look at it this way: it is better that you voluntarily step aside now, because the monumental indignity and inevitable humiliation of being forced aside after the November 2020 election results come in would be far worse. Far worse.

Give it some thought. America will wait.