

Among the myriad treasonous acts committed under the current regime, perhaps the most egregious is the outright disregard – indeed, patent disdain – for the rule of law and the Constitution. As but one example, Art. 2, § 3 mandates that a president “take Care that that the Laws be faithfully executed...”

Ever since the q-slug took office – one might hesitate to describe the act as being lawfully elected to the office – he has done virtually everything within his power to ensure that the laws be not faithfully executed. Instead, they have been routinely circumvented or, when that doesn't work, simply disregarded and ignored. In addition, the provisions of the Constitution have been shredded and sent off to various landfills, also sometimes described as Democrat-blue states and municipalities.

Perhaps the most obvious violation of the Constitution and the rule of law now taking place is the q-slug's eradication of the southern border and invitation of the rest of the world's people – almost literally – to illegally enter the nation, sometimes also described colloquially as an “invasion.”

Indeed, not only does he condone the invasion, he supports and finances it by providing airline flights to illegals from foreign destinations to airports scattered throughout the country..., but he will not identify them out of concern that the attendant felonies might be objected to by those who foolishly adhere to the rule of law.

In his June 16, 1858 speech to the Republican State Nominating Convention in Springfield, Illinois, soon-to-be President Lincoln noted: “A house divided against itself cannot stand. I believe this government cannot endure, permanently half slave and half free. I do not expect the Union to be dissolved — I do not expect the house to fall — but I do expect it will cease to be divided. It will become all one thing or all the other.”

The First Civil War resulted in vindication of Lincoln's prediction that the nation would survive..., but a lot of Americans died in the interim. Another inflection point in the nation's history is nearing. If the citizens of this nation value its continued existence – further postponing Benjamin Franklin's admonition that we have a republic..., if we can keep it – a test of that goal approaches: the November 5, 2024 general election.

It is hoped – fervently – that we can avoid a Second Civil War. Reduced to its essence, the choice boils down to this: which of two candidates for the presidency is to be preferred..., a flawed and, yes, sometimes banal person, but one who unquestionably loves this country..., or a q-slug who seeks another term to complete the “fundamental transformation” promised in 2008 by “The Hawai'ian?”

Choose wisely and carefully. Very carefully.
