(Apr. 10, 2023) — The recent assault upon former NCAA champion swimmer Riley Gaines is only one of the more recent outrages committed by the rabid hyenas of the “trans” movement.

Following her speech last week at San Francisco State University defending women’s sports, Gaines said a man wearing a dress – presumably a transvestite camouflaged to “fit in” – punched her in the face at least twice while police escorted her to a “safe room” to escape the howling pack of canines as they shouted profanity and obscenity-laced epithets at her.

She was barricaded there for three hours before being able to safely leave the campus. In most states other than California, that could constitute kidnapping or hostage-taking. Dear Ms. Gaines: here is the contact information for attorney Harmeet Dhillon.

Lamentably – but unsurprisingly – the university has issued a statement praising the hyenas for exercising their “right to protest peacefully” in exercising their First Amendment rights. One need look no farther than that statement to see how far down SFSU has defined its own ivory tower deviancy.

Worse, the mindset embodied in the SFSU hyena defense statement typifies that which now passes for “higher education” on college and university campuses across the nation. Leftist indoctrination does not constitute education. These people need some serious professional help.

As Tucker Carlson notes: “That’s the most dangerous extremist group in the United States. There’s no mistaking it.” Like Tucker Carlson or not, it is hard to disagree with his assessment of the trans-hyena cult.

In the ongoing debate over “trans rights,” it is important to keep in mind some immutable and, to the trans cabal, inconvenient facts – scientific and medical facts rather than the incoherent “I’m a woman because I say I am a woman” hyena trans-babble – as the debate rages.

First, the “trans” pack needs to correct its grammar: people who recognize that there are primarily – and by that is meant the view of 99.99% of people – only two genders, male and female, should not be labeled “trans-phobic.” They do not harbor a “phobia” or irrational “fear” of those claiming anomalous, “fluid” or “nonexistent” genders.

Instead, they harbor a respect for science and medicine. True, some will have “contempt,” “disdain” and even “disgust” for those in the rabid trans pack. But “fear” is not properly associated with them..., unless trans pack members are wielding guns or plotting mass murders.

And even then, the fear – and response – would be justified as being based on the intent of the assailants to do violent harm and not the fact that “it” is or claims to be a “trans.”

“The structure of the DNA double helix (type B-DNA). The atoms in the structure are colour-coded by element and the detailed structures of two base pairs are shown in the bottom right.”

Second, a person’s gender at birth is – 99.99% of the time – scientifically and medically defined by the composition of the person’s deoxyribonucleic acid (“DNA”) embedded in the person’s chromosomes. In 99.99% of the cases, a person who at birth has DNA/XY chromosomes is scientifically and medically categorized as a male, while a female person at birth has DNA/XX chromosomes.

The motivation and goal of an XY person to become an XX person – or vice versa – through “It is so because I say it is so” babble is irrational, no matter what CNN, MSNBC or NPR says.

Unless there are medical procedures whereby a person’s entire original DNA and chromosomal makeup at birth can be – and actually is – altered, the surgical implantation, attachment or carving of different plumbing does nothing to create a different chromosomal DNA gender. Hormonal therapy won’t do it; cosmetics applied with a forklift won’t do it; and fact-denying gibberish won’t do it.

These faux “solutions” result only in something not unlike that which Dr. Frankenstein created. Indeed, geneticists concede and now recognize that even following “sex change” surgery – which affects only a person’s anatomy and not one’s “internal sense of being” – the “new” individual’s chromosomal and genetic makeup remains unchanged because “[w]hatever set of chromosomes a person has when they are born cannot be changed.”

And with the current lunacy of people subscribing to the sub-cult of “furries” – where clan members are “seven times more likely than the general population to identify as transgender...” – why, for but one example, might not Anthony Fauci’s internal “sense of being” be allowed to “trump” medical science and permit him, if he so desired, to demand that he become a centaur. There are likely a lot of people who would pay good money to watch that surgery..., perhaps it could even be streamed.

And whether or not experimental “gene therapy” can play a role in the actual metamorphosing of a person’s entire chromosomal DNA structure from “XY” at birth to “XX” later – or vice versa – remains experimentally unproven. If such complete XY to XX or XX to XY chromosome alterations are now successfully taking place, your humble servant would welcome proof, because thus far, they have escaped his attention.

Stated otherwise, if you are XY at birth, you will expire as an XY; if you are XX at birth, you too will pass away as XX when your earthly race is over, regardless of your then-existing plumbing or your “internal sense of being.”

There are, of course, instances where biological anomalies can produce, for example, persons with medical gender dysphoria. Significantly, the Mayo Clinic website addressing gender dysphoria states: “A diagnosis for gender dysphoria is included in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-5).” (Emphasis added).

It is therefore no great leap to deduce from the Mayo website that gender dysphoria – as opposed to vacuous assertions of “Today, I think I’ll be a woman so that I can kick butt in the swimming pool” – is more of a mental issue than a “gender-fluid” medical figment of the pack. Moreover, organizations that accommodate and acquiesce in such nonsense are a part of the problem and decidedly not a part of the solution.

Third, soon, the 99.99% of Americans, also known as a “super-majority,” will open their eyes and see these “trans” radicals for what they are – the kissing-cousin hyenas to Dr. Frankenstein’s creature – and the better off the nation will be. For those with true medical problems, including but not confined to gender dysphoria, there are avenues of treatment that do not involve acquiescence in “I-want-to-be-a-woman-so-I AM-a woman” end-around runs on science, medicine and biology, not to mention rational thought.

Enough already with tail-wag-the-dog “solutions” to manufactured problems. And the physicians who assist in these aberrations need to again examine the Hippocratic Oath which supposedly binds them.

Finally, people should remember that, as Thomas Jefferson noted with respect to the “tree of liberty,” arboreal plants are not the only things needing periodic refreshing “with the blood of patriots and tyrants.” Cultural and societal norms on occasion need similar refreshing.

Recall as well that not all tyrants must be governmental actors. Packs of hyenas can also act in tyrannical, dangerous and violent ways. And like Dr. Frankenstein’s creation, when without consequence – and especially when receiving mindless external praise such as seen in the Gaines/SFSU statement – they do actual damage and commit actual crimes, regardless of whether Soros-acolyte prosecutors take action, they need to be stopped.
